South Africa's MNR terrorists in Mozambique have massacred 14 people travelling on a drought relief lorry in the southern province of Inhambane. The lorry was being used by the government's natural disasters' department to carry workers between Inhambane town and the nearby town of Maxixe. The natural disasters' department distributes foreign relief for drought victims in Inhambane and other provinces of Mozambique. The MNR terrorists attacked the lorry with rifle and bazooka fire and then set it alight. Eleven passengers were killed on the spot and three died later in hospital. About 20 others were wounded.
