

(Struggle against banditry)

South African backed MNR bandits derailed a train early on 16 November on the Goba line, which links Maputo to Swaziland. The train was travelling from Maputo to the district of Boane, about 30 kilometres to the south west when it hit a mine. The train driver was injured in the derailment, and about 50 metres of track were damaged. Several wagons overturned in the incident. The Goba line is one of the principal routes used by Swaziland for its trade. This is the third time in less than a month that it has been subject to bandit sabotage.

M10 News Review (142) 1/12/88

from AIM - 16/11/88