

Money for Africa

ZAMBIA and Mozambique have obtained full funding for the first phase of their national programmes to combat AIDS. Donor agencies have pledged $4.4 million and $3 million to Zambia and Mozambique respectively for programmes lasting between three and five years.

Zambia and Mozambique are the eighth and ninth countries to receive pledges of funding at meetings organised by the World Health Organization and their ministries of health. They join Uganda, Kenya, Tanzania, Ethiopia, Rwanda, Zaire and Senegal on the list of African countries which have national programmes to fight AIDS under way. □
