

MNR and UNITA activities The sabotage of power lines carrying electricity to Maputo on the evening of 4th February four km from the South African border was assumed to be the work of saboteurs from South Africa, which had been recruiting, supplying and aiding the MNR terrorists, Maputo radio said on 5th February. That morning, the radio said, a goods train had come under fire just as it was crossing the Swazi border into Mozambique; an apprentice driver had been killed. 7/2/86
