

Mozambican dies in east Germany

A Mozambican worker in former East Germany died on Monday from wounds sustained in a racist attack in Dresden.

Jorge Gumundai was returning by tram from a discotheque with his German wife when a group of neo-nazis - known as 'skinheads' - threw him out of the tram when it was travelling at considerable speed.

Gumundai fell into a deep coma and did not regain consciousness despite several operations.