Zimbabwe sends 600 soldiers

From Michael Hornsby

Some 600 Zimbabwe soldiers have set up camp in Mozambique to help to protect the pipeline which carries all Zimbabwe's petrol and diesel fuel, according to South African intelligence sources.

Although there has been no confirmation from Zimbabwe Government officials informed sources in Harare, the Zimbabwe capital, believe that the South African information is correct.

It is believed that the Zimbabwean soldiers were sent into Mozambique about a fortnight ago to guard a pipeline pumping station at Maforga, about 50 miles over the border. It looks as if the decision to send them was the result of a little reported visit to Harare by President Machel earlier in the month.
